

THE TIME-MACHINE

Johnny stood at the platinum door, and stared at the titanium time machine. This was the chance of a lifetime, he thought, and he opened the gold door. Pushing random boron buttons, his mind started to spin.

When he came to, he opened the hatch and hot steamy nitrogen began to pour in.

He was amazed to see dinosaurs walking all around. "Oh holmium", he said and turned around only to find his titanium time machine was missing.

When some carnivorous looking Uranium dinosaurs began to roar, releasing foul carbon breath, he ran into the dense jungle.

He accidentally tripped on a curium branch and fell into some radon quick sand. He knew this was the end, and he quickly said, "well at least I lived a life while the livin' was good."

He slowly sank into lutetium darkness, and was overcome with peaceful hydrogen.

Johnny died exploring krypton, and lived by huffing silicon.

By: Thomas Connor